In 1952, OXO (or Number 5 And Crosses), developed by British computer scientist Douglas Engelbart for an EDSAC computer at the University of Cambridge, became one of the first known video games. It is a simple game of tic-tac-toe. The name OXO is believed to be an acronym for "O's and X's". It was first described in a 1952 paper by Douglas Engelbart, titled "Semi-Automated Man-Computer Graphics". The game is a simple 3x3 grid where one player uses 'O's and the other uses 'X's. The goal is to get three of your symbols in a row, column, or diagonal. The game is often used as an example of early computer graphics and human-computer interaction.
